

THE OLD THING.

Since Edward Townsend has made such a success with his book "Chimie Fadden" and his play the Examiner and Chronicle mention him as the "California Author."

Now as a matter of fact his success in the world of letters is in no way due to his being a Californian. He got his first training as a writer under Dennis McCarthy on the Virginia Evening Chronicle.

He went to San Francisco to work on the Examiner, but no one on that paper was able to discern any talent in his writing. He also tried the Chronicle, but with the same success. His work was not acceptable and he was not able to earn $15 a week with his pen. He accordingly turned to New York and the Sun, always on the alert for fresh talent, soon took him to its bosom and allowed him full swing. As a result he made a hit directly and is now enjoying fame and a fat income, two desirable things for a man who writes.

He never got a helping hand in San Francisco and he owes that city nothing. He is a product of Virginia City and New York.

Rudyard Kipling had his first stories refused by the Examiner and Robert Louis Stevenson was unable to get a story accepted by any of the San Francisco dailies. They were both told by the pin-headed people who have the say in such matters, that story writing was not their forte.

The Ozone Excuse.

The editor of the San Francisco Call in attempting to account for the immorality, wickedness, and boodlism of San Francisco lays it to the climatic condition of California. He says:

The peculiar climatic conditions which prevail here necessarily produce a departure in conduct from the standard communities where these conditions do not exist. An excess of ozone in the air and the absence of a repressing climate naturally tend to make us free, hearty and aspiring. Here, as in all other cities, the population is confined at work during the week, and when Sunday comes with its gladness and sunshine and cheer it is not in vigorous human blood to resist the temptation to go abroad in the fine free air and drink of the cup which nature has filled to the brim with precious life-giving offerings.

The above is a very delightful specimen of the cool airy logic that a man sometimes blows through his hat in the San Francisco papers at $10 a column. It is ridiculous to lay wickedness to sunshine.

The fact that the sun don't shine in San Francisco over 63 days in the year knocks the argument in the head. Sunshine or the lack of it don't maintain a solid nine in the Board of Aldermen or compell preachers to have special body guards to preserve their characters after 8 o'clock in the evening. The ozone excuse won't wash. The people of the Bay City are like Topsey "Ise just wicked."

The McNulty Case.

In the local columns is published the Truckee Republicans explanation of the way Pat McNulty got burned at Truckee. It strikes the APPEAL as a very lame explanation of the affair, but it is given for what it is worth.

The whereabouts of McNulty is still a mystery. It is hinted at by the Republican and very indefinitely. If McNulty's injuries were slight why doesn't the paper in its explanation publish a card from the Superintendent of the County Hospital relative to the extent of his injuries, and say in plain English whether the man is alive or dead.

The APPEAL takes pleasure in announcing that the Grand Jury has nearly finished its labors and is soon to make a report. It has been hampered considerably in being restricted to the years 1894 and '95. The way the county has been boodled and the taxpayers robbed by the old Republican combine will never be fully unearthed until a Grand Jury is empowered to go back as far as it pleases and plow up the musty records of the County building.

The legislature of Utah has undoubtedly made a pretty mess of its first Senatorial election. Arthur Brown, a man of no calibre whatever as a statesman, and regarded as nothing more than a tricky attorney, is one of the men chosen for the place. He won by petty jobbery and a wave of disgust is sweeping all over Utah.

The Parkinson contempt case comes up in the Justice Court this morning at 10 o'clock.
